International Conference on
Role of Technology in the Enforcement of Law and Order

About the Conference

Concept Note

In the 21st century, technology has emerged as an indispensable tool in maintaining and enforcing law and order. With the advent of the digital age, law enforcement agencies and legal institutions worldwide are increasingly leveraging advanced technologies to address complex challenges related to crime prevention, detection, investigation, and adjudication. From artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning to surveillance systems, digital forensics, biometrics, blockchain, and predictive policing, the integration of technology has significantly enhanced the capacity of state and non-state actors in upholding justice and ensuring public safety. However, alongside the promise of efficiency and innovation, the use of technology in law enforcement also raises critical legal, ethical, and human rights concerns, particularly in areas of privacy, accountability, data protection, and the potential for abuse.

This international conference seeks to provide a multidisciplinary platform for scholars, legal practitioners, technologists, policy-makers, law enforcement officials, and civil society actors to critically examine the role of technology in the enforcement of law and order. The aim is to foster an informed global discourse that not only highlights the opportunities created by technological innovations but also addresses the challenges and risks involved in their deployment. The conference will encourage comparative analysis of practices across jurisdictions, identifying successful models as well as failures, particularly in the context of democratic accountability, the rule of law, and access to justice.

Objectives

The Conference aims at achieving the following objectives:

The conference is intended to offer an opportunity to share insights with experts and participants from various sectors covering aspects related to technology's role in law enforcement.

To enhance new ideas that could help presenters advance their research and forge new professional relationships.

Expected Outcomes

At the end of the conference, the following outcomes are expected to be outlined:

Acquaint yourself with the current issues of technology in the contemporary legal world.

Innovations and applications of advanced ideas for promoting awareness of using technology in the administration of justice.

Socio-economic benefits through strong and enforced technological measures.
